

ROBERT L. WAGGONER, J. H. DOYAL, Sworn for the State. We are detectives of the city police department of the city of Atlanta. We are acquainted with J. E. Duffy. Several months ago we saw Mr. Duffy in the office of the detective department. We do not know whether or not he came to the office upon his own initiative, or whether or not someone requested him to come. The first time we saw him was when he was there and talking about what he knew about his hand getting out at the National Pencil Company. Mr. Duffy stated that he had heard that it had been stated that the blood found on the factory floor possibly came from his finger when it was cut. He stated that this was not true, that it could not have been possible. He stated as his reason the fact that he had some waste in his hand at the time his finger on his other hand was cut and that he caught his finger at once in his other hand with the waste around it and held it tight catching whatever blood came from his hand in the waste and holding his finger tight with the waste so as to impede the flow of blood, and that holding his hand in this way he went immediately out of the room and on into Mr. Frank's office.
